REIMAGINING JOB QUALITY MEASUREMENT

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

NOVEMBER 2022

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We are grateful to the cross-sector leaders listed below, whose significant contributions to the Job Quality Measurement Initiative (JQMI) made this report possible.

While the report draws on meetings with and written recommendations from the JQMI participants listed below, the ultimate product represents a synthesis of many perspectives. As such, participation does not imply endorsement of all recommendations in this report.

Collaborators at the U.S. Department of Labor

We deeply appreciate the engagement of partners across the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL), whose vision and deep commitment to advancing good jobs through better measurement inspired the JQMI. Too many DOL partners contributed to the initiative to list here, but below we have named key representatives who participated in meetings and shared priorities, ideas, and feedback. We are particularly grateful to Alex Hertel-Fernandez, whose leadership and expertise helped us see what could be possible with better job quality data.
